The Empire State Building Lights Up for Amver!

M/V Bella L rescues lone sailor off coast of New Jersey

Captain V. Nychayev , master of the bulker Bella L, and his crew successfully rescued a lone sailor on July 8, 2008. The sailor notified rescue authorities that his sailboat was taking on water 800 miles off the coast of Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Captain Nychayev, having been notified by the United States Coast Guard, was guided to the distress location by a Coast Guard aircraft from Air Station Elizabeth City.

After locating the sailboat and determining on scene weather and sea conditions were unsafe to lower the lifeboats, Captain Nychayev ordered a pilot ladder over the side and crewmembers to stand by for rescue operations.

Maneuvering the massive ship alongside the sailboat the Captain ordered a life ring fitted with a strobe light thrown in the direction of the survivor.

Able Bodied Seaman Ivanov Ivaylo then directed the survivor into the life ring and pulled him aboard the Bella L.

The survivor, suffering only from mild hypothermia, was taken to the Bella L's next port of call.

CSAV Mexico assists vessel beset by weather

On August 28 the M/V CSAV Mexico was diverted to assist the sailboat Defiance which was beset by weather approximately 150 miles off the coast of California.

The Mexico arrived on scene and, after determining the Defiance crew did not wish to abandon ship, passed survival equipment and other supplies to the crew of the sailboat.

Once the Mexico provided the sailors survival equipment it was released and resumed its voyage.

Songa Pearl rescues sailor near Bermuda

The M/V Songa Pearl was called upon to assist a sailor suffering from a severe medical condition early in September.

The sailor was in distress 275 miles north east of Bermuda when the United States Coast Guard requested them to divert.

Arriving on the scene the Songa Pearl's master and crew braved severe weather conditions to safely evacuate the ill sailor.

Amver tanker saves four Swedes in high seas rescue

Four Swedish sailors were rescued by the tanker Parthenon in a dramatic high seas rescue, during weather so rough a rescue helicopter had to return to shore, shortly before midnight Saturday, September 28th.

Captain Vasileiadis Lazaros, master of the Greek flagged tanker, was sailing to the Port of Setubal when his crew heard a distress call from the sailboat Sun Chaser approximately 84 miles west of Cabo Sao Vicente, Portugal. Within two minutes of receiving the distress Captain Lazaros was on the bridge directing the ship to proceed to the stricken sailboat.

Steering the 800 foot tanker, managed by Tsakos Group of Athens, Greece, towards the distress location Captain Lazaros notified Portuguese rescue authorities. "I ordered all crew to standby on deck," stated Captain Lazaros as he began preparing to rescue the four Swedes.

Coordinating his efforts with Radio Lisboa, Captain Lazaros overheard a Portuguese rescue helicopter order the Swedish sailors into a lifeboat. "The sailors radioed the rescue helicopter and said they could not abandon ship in the rough weather because their lifeboat had been ripped from the sailboat and drifted away," Captain Lazaros added.

As weather conditions deteriorated the rescue helicopter was unable to cued all four Swedish sailors.

The Swedish survivors, two men and two women, were cared for aboard the Parthenon and taken to Setubal where they were met by Portuguese officials.

safely hoist the sailors and returned to base leaving the 107,000 ton dead weight tanker the only means of rescue for the sailors.

"I ordered the Sun Chaser to make fast to our port side amidships and had the crew lay down the pilot ladder," Captain Lazaros recounted in an email to the Amver center. Within two minutes of lowering the pilot ladder the first survivor was safely on board the Parthenon. Within three hours of receiving the call for help the Parthenon had res-

Amver, sponsored by the United States Coast Guard, is a unique computer based, voluntary ship reporting system used worldwide by search and rescue authorities to arrange for assistance to persons in distress at sea. With Amver, rescue coordinators can identify participating ships in the area of distress and divert the best suited ship to respond.

Amver's mission is to quickly provide search and rescue authorities, on demand, accurate information on the positions and characteristics of vessels near a reported distress.

Notes from New York

As the leaves turn and we begin thinking of the end of the year it's a good time to reflect back at Amver's history and success over the last 50 years.

July 18th marked our anniversary and the biggest celebrant may have been the Empire State Building. If you were looking across the Manhattan skyline on the evening of July 16th you saw the majestic landmark in the familiar Amver colors of Blue—White—Blue.

In addition to the 50th anniversary there were many annual Amver awards ceremonies held around the world. The largest, by far, was the Greek Amver awards ceremony hosted by the Propeller Club, Port of Piraeus. This year's ceremony was so large it had to be held in Athens largest venue at the Intercontinental Hotel. The Propeller Club also recognized Amver's anniversary by presenting us with a beautiful silver tray.

Finally, Amver launched its Facebook, Twitter, and Blog presence this summer. You can become a friend of Amver on Facebook, follow Amver on twitter at twitter.com/Amver, or read the Amver blog at amveruscg.blogspot.com.

Now there is no excuse for not keeping up to date on all the latest Amver news.

This is the last Amver Bulletin before the holidays and I just want to take a moment and wish each of you a very happy holiday season.

Without the dedication and participation of you Amver would not enjoy the its success. Have a safe holiday season and stay tuned to the Amver blog!
